

I pray for Theresa May, for spiritual and mental strength, for continued inner resilience and determination. The body of politicians who should rally round her are not solid for her. Her party has lost its integrity and unity, and is now just a collection of individuals with personal aims and agendas. It is as if they are all judging her in the same light, as if she is only interested in her personal agenda, whereas in fact her mind she is just trying to democratically represent the consensus of the will of the country.

But within all that You have you have created an agenda for Theresa. She is not fully ready, nor fully competent by any means to carry it out. But she knows she has to. She's not even sure of the extent of her purpose. But You know it. She goes through the motions and recites her mantra, but You gradually instil in her soul and mind a sense of purpose and meaning not yet apparent, even to her. She needs allies – reliable soulmates who are politically astute, trustworthy and wise. Given her such people I pray. Amen
